There are rules and regulations with the birds but kids cant seem to follow them. They have kickstands that allow them to be propped correctly, yet they're still thrown down. There is also an age restriction and an ID has to be scanned in order for you to create an account but ive seen a child who looked 8 on one. There are alarms on them too but I've seen ones with cut wires that will still roll. They're fun and all but I agree, a complete pain, simply because of the users lacks of consideration. When my boyfriend and I walk past broken or mistreated ones we always say ".. and this is why we cant have nice things".
